IRRIGATION.

The Salt Lake Convention Closes Its Labors

STRONG RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED

They [illegible] the States and Territories and Money from Their Sale to be Applied to Irrigation

SALT LAKE, Sept. 17.—The [illegible] closed its labors today after [illegible]. The first thing taken up [illegible] this morning, and [illegible] was the report of the committee on resolutions, which [illegible] as follows:

Resolved, That this congress is in favor of granting in trust to the states and territories all lands part of the public domain within such states and territories, excepting mineral lands, for the purpose of [illegible] the lands now arid fertile and capable of supporting population.

Resolved, That said grant of lands should be made by the United States, conditional that the state or territory receiving the benefits shall use the funds derived from the sale or lease of such lands to promote the reclamation of arid lands and the surplus remaining to be added to the school fund in the state or territory in which the surplus occurs.

Resolved, That the trust so created shall be so conducted as to secure to the ownership of the irrigable land to actual settlers in suitable holdings.

The discussion on this was most protracted, some of the members being in favor of adopting certain restrictions in the number of acres to be granted. After a lengthy discussion the following was adopted as the result of the deliberations of the convention:

Resolved, That this congress is in favor of granting in trust upon such conditions as shall best serve the public interest to the states and territories needful of irrigation all lands now part of the public domain within such states and territories, excepting mineral lands, for the purpose of placing water thereon to render [illegible] fertile and [illegible] population.

Upon the request of the Kansas delegation the following was also adopted:

Resolved, That it is justly due the people of Montana, the Dakotas, Wyoming, Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, who have paid into the United States [illegible] million dollars [illegible] for these lands, and have expended other millions in fruitless attempts to farm them without irrigation that a portion of the funds so paid should be expended in securing to such lands the benefit of irrigation.

As a committee to carry out the action of the congress and prepare a memorial to congress the convention appointed the following committee: C. C. Wright of California, Platt Rogers of Colorado, A. D. Foote of Idaho, A. H. Stubbs of Kansas, J. C. Bodkin of Montana, John Ahbott of Nebraska, S. D. Hewitzer of New Mexico, J. H. Hamilton of Oregon, J. H. Bailey of South Dakota, Walter Gresham of Texas, W. H. King of Utah, Frank Bond of Wyoming, and C. W. Irish of Nevada.

The executive committee consists of Isaac Trumbo of California, A. W. Hagar of Idaho, J. W. Gregory of Kansas, W. A. Clark of Montana, Jas. Stephenson of Nebraska, W. H. Poor of New Mexico, L. B. Huntington of Oregon, J. H. Bailey of South Dakota, Monigen Jones of Texas, Edward P. Meade of Wyoming, Francis G. Newland of Nevada, W. A. Smythe of Utah.

The next place of meeting will be designated by call from the executive committee.

A Decision Against Davis.

DENVER, Sept. 17.—W. H. Davis, the condemned murderer from Pueblo, had his [illegible] presented to the supreme court in chambers this morning and the judge at 11 o'clock announced that the application for a supersedeas was denied and unless the governor shall commute the sentence of execution Davis will be hanged in the penitentiary at Canon City during the next eight days.

The crime for which Davis was sentenced was the shooting of his aged mother, Mrs. Carrie Ainsley, the shot proving fatal, and for murdering James Arnold, a lodger in the house, at the same time.

The Attorney General on Lotteries.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Attorney-General Miller has filed in the supreme court of the United States his reply to briefs filed by counsel for J. L. Rapier and George W. Dupre, representing the Louisiana Lottery company.

Each of these cases is an application for a discharge by writ of habeas corpus from arrest for an alleged violation of the anti-lottery legislation of the United States.

Rapier was arrested under an information in the district court for the southern district of Alabama. Dupre was arrested under two indictments in the circuit court for the eastern district of Louisiana.

The charge against Rapier on indictment was the mailing of a newspaper containing an advertisement of the Louisiana Lottery company, and the other indictment was for [illegible] of a letter concerning the lottery. Attorney-General Miller, in addressing himself to the constitutionality of the law, [illegible] the counsel for petitioners, says [illegible], under such circumstances, it [illegible] seem that the question of the constitutionality of the legislation involved should [illegible] settled. It seems, however, otherwise. The revenues poured into the coffers of the Louisiana Lottery company by its [illegible] victims are too large to be surrendered without another struggle. A very small per cent of those revenues suffices to pay for [illegible] a new contest. Accordingly nothing [illegible] by the fact that this nefarious [illegible] is under the ban of public opinion [illegible] legislative enactment, and of judicial decision [illegible] the most eminent counsel in the land [illegible] making a very astute but, as I [illegible], a very sophistical presentation of a [illegible].

Continuing he says: "Much stress is laid [illegible] the fact that Louis XIV., George Washington and even preachers of the gospel have in times past believed in and profited by lotteries. He might have added that persons no less illustrious and worthy, [illegible] of these same men, in [illegible] England and in this country [illegible] and encouraged the use of the holy [illegible] and the burning of heretics, [illegible] and witches, in the interest of religion. [illegible] will hardly do to insist that the [illegible] of the United States would [illegible] in the interest of constitutional [illegible] if an attempt were made to revive [illegible]."

The attorney general takes each of the [illegible] by the petitioner's counsel and [illegible] provision of the constitution is [illegible] by the anti-lottery law.

[illegible] he says: "Each of the [illegible] seeking discharge from arrest [illegible] or information for illegally [illegible] unmailable matter in the mails. [illegible] the law by its terms authorized the [illegible] deemed to be [illegible] and whether it is competent for [illegible] such action by the post [illegible] questions not involved in [illegible] these cases. Nor does it seem to me [illegible] any cases in which if the law were [illegible] invalid in that part, it would [illegible] be invalid under the decisions of [illegible] in its entirety. My understanding [illegible] the decisions not only of this court [illegible] hold that where a number [illegible] designated in the statute as [illegible] a particular crime and as to [illegible] the legislation is unauthorized [illegible] required to [illegible] as are within the authority of the [illegible] and enforce the law as to [illegible].

I think no decision will be found wherein it is held that if an act defines different offenses and provides for their punishment the fact that as to one of the offenses the legislation was unauthorized renders the entire legislation invalid. And so if the act defines and prescribes a punishment for an offense, the fact that it also independently of such provision imposes duties on officers which are unauthorized by the constitution is immaterial. If I am correct in this discrimination then the provision for the punishment of mailing unmailable matter is in no way dependent upon those prescribing duties of post office officials in relation to such matters, but each may stand or fall independently of the other."

BASEBALL

WESTERN BASEBALL ENDED.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 17.—The Western Baseball association held an extra session [illegible] day. It was decided that the season [illegible] closed [illegible] Sunday [illegible] Sioux City being at the head at that time the championship was awarded [illegible]. The games therefore which have been and are to be played between Sioux City and Kansas City count only as exhibition games. The game today was won by Kansas City by heavy batting and costly errors by [illegible] and Schebeck. [illegible] 11 to 5.

ANOTHER ACCOUNT.

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 17.—At a meeting of the Western association held at the Midland hotel Sept. 17, 1891 there were present: Denver by D. C. Packard, president; Omaha, by W. H. McCord, president; Sioux City, by R. F. Mulcahy and A. C. Buckenberger and Kansas City by John W. Speas and L. R. Manning. The Denver club moved that the season of 1891 be deemed closed on Sept. 13, 1891 at [illegible]. This motion was carried. Ayes, Sioux City and Omaha; nays, Kansas City.

It was resolved that the association should remain intact and that each club be declared in full standing. The Omaha club announced itself in full life with no thought of disbanding. The meeting adjourned to the regular annual meeting in October next.

DENVER [illegible].

DENVER, Sept. 17.—The report received here to-night from Kansas City that a meeting of the Western association had been held [illegible] to-day at which D. C. Packard, president of the Denver club was present, and that the season had been closed and the pennant awarded to Sioux City, was a great surprise to Mr. Packard and Manager Sam W. Cantril. Both these gentlemen are in this city and neither were in attendance upon the reported Kansas City meeting. They are very indignant about the matter and declare that the entire affair is a scheme of the Kansas City, Sioux City and Omaha clubs to "do up" the Denver club. They declare that they are ready to play out the season and are holding their men for that purpose.

Telegrams were sent by Mr. Packard tonight to N. E. Young, president of the National League, and L. C. Krauthoff, president of the Western Association, notifying them that he had never been notified of the Kansas City meeting, nor was he present as reported, and that he will contest any club claiming the pennant, for the reason that the Denvers have won more and lost less games than any other club in the association.

NEW YORK-CHICAGO.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—Rusie pitched, New York won. "Oh, for more Rusie," exclaimed the cranks. The home team put up an old-time game in field and their hits were few, but they were telling ones. A triple, a double and a single in succession netted the New Yorks two runs in the second inning, followed in the third by a home run, making a total of three to their credit, and all they got, for their other hits were few and far between. Until the eighth inning Chicago could not touch the Young Cyclone and their only run, made in that inning, was earned by a double and a triple. Score: New York 3, Chicago 1.

PHILADELPHIA-CINCINNATI.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—An error of McPhee in the third inning gave the home team three runs. The other runs were secured by good batting and good judgment in running bases. Score: Philadelphia 6, Cincinnati 4.

CLEVELAND-BROOKLYN.

BROOKLYN, Sept. 17.—Aside from Ward the work of the home team was very indifferent. The score stood a tie when Cleveland retired in their ninth inning. After three outs had been made on easy infield hits and a [illegible] had been given on balls the visitors scored their winning run. Score: Cleveland 6, Brooklyn 5.

BOSTON-PITTSBURG.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—Boston and Pittsburg played a ten inning tie game, darkness coming on put a stop to further play. Had it not been for errors by Duffy and Stovey in the eighth inning the Pirates would have won the game. The long hitting of the visitors was the feature. Score: Boston 7, Pittsburg 7.

Paid for Politeness.

RALEIGH, N. C., Sept. 17.—A special to the Chronicle from Wilson, N. C., says: "Last fall a wealthy northern gentleman visited Rocky Mount. He was very fond of hunting and Mr. C. H. Harris, ex-editor of the Rocky Mount Plaindealer, lent the stranger his dogs and showed him numerous courtesies. The stranger dropped dead on Monday and when his will was opened it was found that he had bequeathed Mr. Harris $100,000 for courtesies and favors shown him, to be paid by his executors in United States currency. Mr. Harris left to-day to get the money."

He Saved the Government.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., Sept. 17.—A. S. Bradley, who owns a farm in Taylor county on which there is a mortgage, received a blank from the [illegible] department asking for particulars. He refused to [illegible], but instead sent a letter to Mr. Porter at Washington to mind his own affairs. Bradley's letter was forwarded to the federal authorities in Iowa resulting in his arrest. Commissioner Hunter of this city held him in the sum of $300 to await the action of the federal grand jury.

A Missionary Vessel Wrecked.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 17.—The mystery surrounding the fate of the schooner Pannonia so long overdue at this port from the Marshall islands, is at last cleared up. The vessel sailed for San Francisco in May laden with a general cargo and had a crew of seven, and also had on board Captain Lonsdale's wife and three children. Several missionaries had taken passage on the Pannonia to this city. The schooner was wrecked on a reef to the northwest of the Hawaiian islands and every person on board was drowned.

Funeral of Dr. Loring.

SALEM, Mass., Sept. 17.—The funeral of Dr. Loring, ex-commissioner of agriculture and United States minister to Portugal was held at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the North Unitarian church. The service in the church was preceded by a simple prayer at the Loring manor by the venerable pastor of the North parish and the Rev. Edward D. Wilson. The body was escorted to Harmony Grove cemetery, its last resting place, by the Sir Knights of Winslow, Lewis commandery of Knights Templars and a long cortege of carriages.

Weather Indications.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—For Colorado—Fair in southeast, local showers in north west portion; variable winds, slight changes in temperature; [illegible] in south east portion.

A Collector Appointed.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—The president to-day appointed Francis Hendricks to be collector of customs at New York.

GARCIA'S ESCAPADE.

[illegible] Opinion [illegible]

A BATTLE IS REPORTED

[illegible] Called [illegible]

[illegible] reports that [illegible] a party of about [illegible] right of the [illegible]. They came from [illegible] Blanco [illegible]. Many of them were Mexicans from Camargo and [illegible] commanded by [illegible] Garcia. A large body of Mexican troops in pursuit engaged them yesterday near San Miguel. The Mexican troops were engaged yesterday with the revolutionists at Mier, sixteen miles from here. There is a report that there was a fight yesterday at Guerrero but I am not acquainted with the particulars.

The wires on the Mexican side which were cut are now repaired. The revolutionists were last heard of at the Ocatical ranch, near Camargo, with a force of 100 men going west into the interior. A deputy United States marshal is said to be with them. Troops from Matamoras and Reynosa are in pursuit.

AN EMISSARY AT LAREDO.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 17.—The Times-Democrat correspondent at Laredo, Tex., telegraphs as follows: Last night while the plaza in the city of Nuevo Laredo was crowded with people, some parties unknown distributed among the crowd a dodger called a "Plan of Revolution." It sets forth that Mexico was in the toils of a second Santa Ana, referring to President Diaz, and all liberty loving people should join in a revolution to secure his overthrow. The [illegible] goes on to name Catarino Garza as chief leader of the revolution and Cruz Sandoval of border fame as commander in chief of the army. Sandoval is the man who crossed the river near here some months ago with seven men and was scooped by the civil authorities.

Garza is also the possessor of an unsavory reputation and his record here is anything but enviable. He recently published a small paper on a ranch in Nueces county, and is now wanted for libel on account of an article published in that paper.

The general opinion here is that the whole affair is a hoax. The reports sent out last night that Garcia had crossed to Mexico with fifty men is discredited. It is known that Sandoval is not with him, but is in Galveston or New Orleans.

A FIGHT REPORTED.

The Picayune's Brownsville, Tex., special says: "The best information here shows that 100 men crossed the river near Omir and Camargo. They cut the telegraph wires but communication was restored to-day. The revolutionists have had a fight with a squad of armed customs guards near San Miguel and lost some of their horses. No one was hurt as far as known."

A Close Traffic Arrangement.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The reports from Denver of a deal between the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe and Denver and Rio Grande roads, are confirmed by the Atchison officials here, who state that an alliance has been formed between the two systems but that no lease or consolidation will be made because both are prohibited by the laws of Colorado. On this account, it is stated, the arrangement is ostensibly in the shape of a close traffic agreement.

[illegible] Boomers.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—A dispatch from Guthrie, O. T., says thousands of boomers are arriving there and going into camp in anticipation of the proclamation opening the reservation to the east of the settlement. The rush bids fair to rival if not exceed that of the opening of Oklahoma.

The [illegible] Case Postponed.

HIAWATHA, Kan., Sept. 17.—The trial of James Brennan, charged with the murder of Sam Wood, has been postponed until Nov. 4. The selection of a jury had begun when it was announced that Mrs. Wood, the widow of the murdered man, and the principal witness, was too ill to attend court.

Republican National Committee Meeting.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Mr. M. P. De Young, editor of the San Francisco Chronicle and a member of the National Republican Executive committee, arrived here last night from New York in company with General Clarkson. To a Post reporter Mr. De Young said: "The executive committee will shortly call a meeting of the national committee which will determine the time and place of holding our national convention. The convention will be held within six months of the meeting of the national committee so as to avoid the extreme summer heat that worried it so bad at Chicago last time. The committee will doubtless convene here in November and so the convention will take place some time during the month of May 1892."

A Welcome to Flower.

WATERTOWN, N. Y., Sept. 17.—Hon. Roswell P. Flower, Democratic nominee for governor, arrived here at 8:35 to-night accompanied by Daniel G. Griffin, state committeeman; his nephew, Fred Flower, of New York and S. L. George of this city.

Eight thousand citizens turned out to welcome Mr. Flower home. He was met at the railroad station by a brass band and was escorted to his carriage. The crowd unhitched the horses and some of the leading business men of the city drew the carriage to Mr. Flower's residence, where Ex-Congressman Lansing of this city welcomed him in a short congratulatory speech. A. D. McKinstry of the Watertown Times welcomed Mr. Flower in behalf of the press.

Mr. Flower then spoke as follows:

FELLOW CITIZENS OF WATERTOWN—With a heart full of gratitude I thank you for this friendly demonstration, recognizing the fact that you do not greet me as allies in the coming political battle, which rightly must divide our people, but as my neighbors and old time friends, bound together by ties that will never sever, by ties of interest, of sympathy, of duty and, I hope I may add, by bonds of mutual regard. The nomination to the office of governor has come to me from my party unsolicited. I am not insensible to the high honor—proposed by the suffrage of our people to be conferred upon me of presiding over the destiny of this state nor unmindful of the responsibility of that position for this is the greatest state in the union. Nowhere else on earth have so many inhabitants in so short a period of time been gathered together over so small a territory as in the state of New York and only fourteen nations of the world have more inhabitants than this commonwealth. In amount and variety of production she ranks first among the states of the union as well for the number of persons employed in various pursuits. To preside over such a state, to be able to contribute anything valuable to the prosperity of such a people might well kindle the pride of any American citizen and fill up the measure of his ambition.

I owe much to the people of Jefferson county where I was born and spent my early manhood. While my residence for the [illegible] has been conferred upon [illegible] a person from [illegible] this section of the state, [illegible] since the days of Silas Wright in 1844, has a [illegible] candidate been selected by either party from this section and never before has the [illegible] fell upon a Jefferson county boy. As [illegible] her sons I hope I can win for her [illegible] will partly repay the debt of gratitude I owe her for the [illegible] they have [illegible].

Your presence [illegible] fidelity and [illegible] faithfully [illegible].

After the speech Mr. Flower [illegible] with the people [illegible] a reception.

Jones is a Bolter.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 17.—In response to inquiries as to his position regarding the Democratic ticket Lieutenant-governor Jones today prepared a statement for the Associated Press. He says that his political action has always been controlled by his sense of loyalty as a citizen never recognizing conflicting party obligations. He believes in this instance that not only have the people been sacrificed, but that the [illegible] of the Democratic party has been [illegible] for behind the nominations and in absolute control of the party are men whose every sentiment of patriotism is subject either to their personal ambition or their selfish greed and they would shape the administration of public affairs to perpetuate their rule. Continuing he says that so complete is the power of these men and dictatorial have they become that members of the party are but serfs so far as political action is concerned.

The [illegible] Ava Mystery.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17.—Miss Ava [illegible] continues to be an unfathomable mystery. She is now in the hands of a detective agency and began to lecture this afternoon at a [illegible] [illegible] is to obtain money to enable the detective agency to explore the mystery of her abduction and singular appearance here. To the detective she has shown her head. Beneath the yellow wig is closely cropped black hair. On the right side of her head, extending below the hair line is the scar of a wound showing the operation of trephining. Other scars appear, one of which she says, is by a cavalry sword, received during the Franco-Prussian war.

To the detective she also has confided a startling story to show why she is obnoxious to the Jesuits. She declares she can exhibit the original documents when she returns to Chicago which will give the names of men who were granted indulgence for the commission of a crime. Notwithstanding these revelations, she says, she is anxious to go to Chicago and to probe the matter of her abduction to the bottom. It is well apparent in consideration of the stories she has told and of the air of plausibility which surrounds them together with her apparent culture and mental ability that the first inquiry should be as to the condition of her mind. Until she returns to Chicago no legal inquest of lunacy can be held.

MISS AVA'S LECTURE.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17.—Miss Ava [illegible] gave her lectures to-night. The [illegible] gives no support to the theory that the woman is insane. Her lectures are models of diction. She makes no assertions that can offend any one, but puts in vivid light the fact that from Chicago she had been brought to Cincinnati without her knowledge or consent, and made her escape from some house in Cincinnati last Friday. She has many intelligent listeners and the common verdict is that she is not insane, but an unusually shrewd woman. Evidently she has been cautioned to moderate her indignation and she says nothing to incite any feeling or passion. On the other hand she denies having said some disagreeable things attributed to her in the papers. No step toward explaining the mystery in her case has been made yet though there is a hint that a clew has been found.

New York Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—The dealings on the stock exchange were on a large scale this morning, 248,000 shares changing hands in the two hours to noon. At the opening, prices were irregular, but the market developed strength in the early dealings and advanced fractionally. Toward 11 o'clock there was considerable selling and it continued throughout the second hour to noon, when the early improvement was not only lost but prices showed declines ranging from ⅛ to 1½ per cent., led by Canada Southern. The principal trading of the morning was in Canada Southern, the Grangers, Louisville and Nashville, Chicago Gas, the Vanderbilts, Reading and Ontario and Western. The last named was very active, but its prices fluctuated only slightly. Reading was a feature of the trading and steadily advanced on the announcement of the dissolution of the Reading syndicate. London houses were heavy buyers, taking fully 20,000 shares in the first hour. The syndicate's shares was said to have been taken by a general pool of all the large holders and it is understood that important speculative interests have opened long accounts in the stock on an understanding that the allotment of the output under the [illegible] will be increased materially. Atchison was depressed in the early dealings on reports that Gould and Sage had recently been free sellers of the stock. The market continued active and the weakness of the morning gave way to strength in the afternoon. Reading was very active and increased its advance materially before the close. Its final price was within a fraction of the best of the day, the advance amounting to 2⅛ per cent. The entire list with few exceptions closed buoyant within a fraction of the best figures. The advances as compared with yesterday's figures [illegible] ¼ to 2⅛ per cent. for active stocks, while some of the specialties recorded even greater improvements. The Vanderbilts [illegible] were heavy buyers of stocks all day. The advance in Lake Shore was generally attributed to W. K. Vanderbilt and it was rumored that assurances had been made that the dividend on the stock would be made at the rate of 7 per cent. per annum. Ontario and Western closed 1½ per cent. higher. The day's business was the largest in months, sales aggregating 577,024.

The Rainmakers Ready.

EL PASO, Tex., Sept. 17.—The government rainmakers have everything in readiness for the grand test to-morrow.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon John T. Ellis of the expedition went up in a balloon two miles to measure the humidity of the atmosphere. The balloon bounded upward when turned loose and up into the blue sky until it looked like a huge bird. When it was up one mile, a number of explosives were set off on the ground.

Since the heavy explosions this afternoon heavy dark clouds have gathered above Mt. Franklin from which point the bombardment took place.

[illegible] to Europe to study the [illegible] Austrian Mannlicher [illegible]. China already possesses 40,000 rifles of the English type, and it is thought that the [illegible] English must be great. Meantime the Chinese government continues [illegible] a policy of delay as if waiting for the time when the [illegible] may be in a condition to resist any ordinary assault on the part of Europeans.

Much indignation has been aroused among the foreigners at Shanghai by the discovery that in all probability none of the actual rioters were executed. It is not infrequent in China that a man who is desired to spare the life of a convicted criminal, and at the same time [illegible] for the supposed victim [illegible]. As the crowd is kept at a distance during executions there is nothing to prevent the deception if the authorities are willing. It is claimed that in the case of several, if not all the rioters condemned for attacking the mission houses, substitutes were executed and the lives of the actual offenders spared.

The French review at Vitry today was one of the grandest affairs since the downfall of the first Napoleon. Over 100,000 troops were assembled and twenty-one guns announced the arrival of President Carnot. The spectators [illegible] and they displayed the utmost enthusiasm [illegible] for Carnot, the republic, the army and De Freycinet. President Carnot frequently applauded the smart appearance and discipline of the troops and he was evidently deeply gratified both by the soldierly conduct of the army and the excited enthusiasm of the crowd. The charge of 10,000 was splendid. President Carnot was a guest of the officers at breakfast and toasted the army and warmly eulogized its discipline and fine soldierly appearance. He said that France was justly proud of her troops and the French army was second to none in the world.

At the conclusion of the review by President Carnot, General Fredericks, the Russian military attache, received an ovation. During the luncheon at the mairie President Carnot toasted the army which he said had known how to show what France might expect from it. He continued: "The whole country which has followed its movements with passionate interest is grateful. The people well know how deeply they are indebted to that school of devotion, self-denial and patriotism. They will know that calmness and [illegible] national loyalty will bestow upon the country a gift of sincere friendship and a confidence warranted by its resources and love of peace which they do not wish to see disturbed. From the plain soldier to the highest in rank, all have inspired the people with confidence. In the name of the government and all France I thank the army." (Cries of bravo.) M. De Freycinet and General [illegible] responded.

A friendly feeling between the French republic and the papacy has found expression in a novel manner. The French ambassador has been using his influence at the Vatican to put an end to the prolonged difference between the pope and Russia relative to the removal of bishops. It is said that the pope has consented that the question concerning the nominations and removals of bishops shall be reserved according to the views of the St. Petersburg government, and that the other question regarding the introduction of the Russian language into the church of Lithuania and Little Russia shall be with a view of applying the measure to offend the sense of the Catholics as little as possible.

The Politischer of Warsaw confirms the massing of Russian troops in the western [illegible] in connection with the manœuvres. An ukase has been issued directing the erection of barracks for the frontier guards, a quarter of a mile from the western frontier.

Bank of England Meeting.

LONDON, Sept. 17.—The regular half yearly meeting of the directors of the Bank of England was held in the directors room of that institution today. The meeting was presided over by Mr. William Lidderdale, the governor of the bank. A statement was submitted showing that the net profits for the half year ended Aug. 31, were £[illegible], making the amount at interest £[illegible]. A dividend of 5 guineas per cent. was declared, leaving in rest £3,013,770. The chairman expressed the opinion that the guarantors of the Barings would not be involved in any loss. The report of the bank's operations was adopted and the meeting then adjourned.

Spanish Floods.

MADRID, Sept. 17.—The municipal authorities of Almeria, capital of the province of that name, estimate that it will require 2,000,000 pesetas to repair the streets and buildings damaged by the recent floods. There was a renewal yesterday evening of the storms and floods in the province of Toledo and more damage has been done. The Infant Isabella, the young King of Spain and Don Francis [illegible] have each sent 15,000 pesetas to the national fund being raised for the relief of the sufferers.

The number of people who perished in the floods in the province of Toledo is now placed at 2300 and the number of lives lost in other localities at 700. In addition many were injured. Distress in the rural districts is intense due to destruction of crops. The total loss from the floods is [illegible] one million pounds.

German Manœuvres.

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—During the German army manœuvres to-day the Eleventh army corps encountered the Fourth in sham battle at Mulhausen in the presence of the kaiser. The Fourth had artillery at the summit of Kaltkopf hill, the main body occupying Grossgrabe village, at the foot of the hill with General Hainesch in command. The Eleventh corps, under Baron Grolman made a feint against the hill and the main attack on Grossgrabe. They faced a heavy fire but failed to dislodge Hainesch and his troops. The kaiser galloped from point to point with indefatigable activity. About 60,000 men were engaged, and the firing was incessant, yet, owing to the use of smokeless powder, the atmosphere was perfectly clear.

Governor Campbell Makes a Speech.

Foster is hard at work preparing for his annual traveling exhibition called "Colorado on Wheels," which he will take south on Oct. 15 this year to exhibit at the Dallas state fair in Texas and elsewhere through the south. There will be four cars. One car will be full of bottled mineral water from Manitou, Pueblo, Pagosa Springs, Canon City and other mineral springs in the state. Mr. Foster will use his new room in the Rowe block for classifying and arranging his exhibit, and people will have three days to go through "Colorado on Wheels" before it goes south.

On his return Mr. Foster intends to maintain the exhibit in his office, where he has a light room 25x100 feet. Here he will keep a constantly renewed exposition of all the products of the state, free to the public. This will be a very valuable means of advertising the resources of Colorado, being located at the tourist center of the state. Next Sunday's GAZETTE will contain the second installment of Washington Irving's "First Voyage of Columbus."

It was a noted King of Israel who said: "I said in my haste, all men are liars." This has been considered by many in the nature of a "give-away," but it is not to be compared with a remark made by the editor of the Loveland Reporter, in his first daily edition. "The Weekly Reporter," he says, "is the only strictly truthful paper in Colorado."

The advantage to Utah in the partial overthrow of the political power of the [illegible] is already apparent. There have been more rich mining discoveries reported this summer than in any previous year in the history of the territory. A few more of these attractive announcements will leave the Mormons in a hopeless minority, and the next census will have a striking story to tell of Utah's progress.

China seems to think that the new modern ships of her navy justify her in turning a deaf ear to the remonstrances of Europeans and Americans. A half day's experience with the allied fleets will convince her of her error. It takes something more than number of ships and men to make a navy, and the operation of the great modern engines of war requires a technical knowledge and a readiness for changing circumstances which the Chinese [illegible] lacking.

There is no doubt that Admiral Brown did quite right in extending asylum to ex-President Balmaceda from his enraged enemies. The principle of extending a refuge to proscripts is clearly established and has been frequently put in practice by the admirals of all the nations represented in the Chilian waters during the present troubles. It was a violation of it which caused the trouble in the Barrundia affair, and a repetition of that disgraceful episode is certainly not desirable. However it is in some respects to be regretted that Balmaceda got away, and especially that it was an American war ship which was selected as his refuge. The incident can hardly fail to add to the prejudice against the United States which is already too prevalent in Chili. The friendship of that country is valuable to us not only on account of the commercial advantages to be derived therefrom, but also from the more sentimental reason that the utmost good feeling ought to prevail among all the republics of the western hemisphere. Besides this it seems probable that Balmaceda was really the worst kind of a tyrant, and that he was not only guilty of political crimes of first magnitude, but was also a thief and murderer, who only differed from the ordinary criminal as his opportunities were greater. If one-tenth of the stories that are told about him are true, Americans may well be sorry that circumstances compelled this nation to assist such a notorious criminal in escaping from his just deserts.

A Hint to Young Writers.

We all know how to talk. There is a certain number of words put on the tongue of every human being, just as the song is given to the canary bird or to the robin. But beyond the song these birds cannot go. And beyond the natural speech, or the words that nature gives to every one, the illiterate human being cannot go. His vocabulary is limited until he becomes a student. Then he begins to widen and there is no near boundary line to its possibilities. The writer who imagines that he can give additional emphasis to a composition by the use of large words is greatly mistaken. The economy of the reader's attention is absorbed in understanding and applying these big words, and there is little of the mental energy left with which to digest the idea that these long words contain. The picture that is brought before his mental vision is therefore dim and uncertain.

If the writer would give more prominence to the idea and less to the verbal frame; in other words, if he would use simple language, which by contrast would bring out the idea, he would not only economize his reader's mental energy, but would benefit himself by making himself more easily understood. The mind is not able to do more than one thing at a time and do it well. It cannot at once delve into the mysteries of a many syllable word and comprehend the thought in a proper manner.—Chicago Post.

The Cobra and the Empty Can.

The terrible cobra de capello, which is feared and venerated in India as a snake god, is occasionally caught napping when he has encroached on the territory of others.

A resident in India says that he was one day much astonished by hearing a succession of reports, like the firing of a revolver, which issued from the "godown," or storeroom. As he opened the door a strange sight met his gaze. A cobra had managed to get into the room and had been attracted by an empty biscuit tin—in American parlance a tin cracker box—about 12 by 6 in., in which some crumbs were still remaining.

The cover had not been well opened, and the edges were jagged. The cobra had passed his head inside to lick up the crumbs, but he could not get it out again. The more he tried, the more difficult did it become.

In his rage his hood expanded and was lacerated by the sharp edges of the tin, and upon this he began to lash about with his tail. Pop, pop, went bottles of champagne and beer; these were the reports which had been heard within, and they had given the signal which brought his executioners to the spot.—Youth's Companion.

This constant bearing of the weight on the left foot makes it wider than the right, and it often happens that a man who tries on a shoe on the right foot and gets a close fit has to discard the shoe altogether, because he cannot endure the pinch caused by the tightness of the left. If when riding on the street car you will take the trouble to notice, you will see that in laced shoes the gap is much smaller on the right foot than on the left, while with button shoes the buttons have to be set back ten times on the left shoe to once on the right.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Rome No Larger Than Brooklyn.

The exaggerations of Vossius, Lipsius and Chateaubriant, who give to imperial Rome 14,000,000, 4,000,000 and 3,000,000 of inhabitants are too absurd to deserve notice. Hume, who, in his masterly essay on the "Populousness of Ancient Nations," has discussed the question of the population of Rome with his usual learning and good sense, arrives at the conclusion that Rome, when at her zenith, might have been as populous as London in 1760; in other words, that she might have had from 700,000 to 800,000 inhabitants. Gibbon estimated the population at 1,200,000, but it would appear that the more moderate estimate of Hume is the more accurate. The population of Rome at its largest, therefore, did not exceed that of Brooklyn in 1891.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Flight of the Stork.

The stork is a remarkably picturesque bird; its snowy body contrasting with the bright red beak and legs, and black quill feathers of the wings, make it a striking object. The flight is magnificent, bolder and more buoyant than that of a heron. Like most large birds, its powers of flight show best when it is at a great height. When we were on the Bastei rock, in Saxon Switzerland, a pair passed overhead, flying southward. Though high above us, we could clearly see the black pinion feathers; and as we watched the powerful beat of the wide spreading wings we thought of the angels in Zechariah's vision who had "wings like the stork."—Chambers' Journal.

Two Knowing Horses.

A horse, stabled with his mate and a third horse, stole hay from the stranger to give to his mate, while he was contented with the ration that had been allotted him. And a horse in a team, nibbling some rich grass on his side, gave at intervals mouthfuls of it to his companion, which could not reach it.—Popular Science Monthly.

In North Carolina garnet crystals are sometimes come across, which, though not fine enough for gems, weigh as much as twenty pounds each and may be cut into dishes or cups measuring from three to six inches across. Tons of them are crushed to make "emery" and the sandpaper called "garnet paper."

Norwegian Horses.

A traveler in Norway says that the horses in that country have a very sensible way of taking their food, which might be beneficially followed here. They have a bucket of water put down beside their allowance of hay. It is interesting to see with what relish they take a sip of the one and a mouthful of the other alternately, sometimes only moistening their mouths as a rational being would while eating his dinner of such dry food. A broken winded horse is scarcely ever seen in Norway, and the question is if the mode of feeding has not something to do with the preservation of the animal's respiratory organs.—London Tit-Bits.

Unsolicited Advice.

Miss Passe (of uncertain age)—To be I don't know whether to go into the surf or not. Some folks say the salt water makes wrinkles.

Old Fisherman—No, mum, it's just the other way, mum. Salt water takes wrinkles out, mum. Just you try it an' see.—New York Weekly.

TRUE ARABIAN HORSES.

THEIR RARE BEAUTY AND INTELLIGENCE DESCRIBED.

They Never Leave Their Native Land—The Horse a Member of an Arab's Family. The Famous Omar I—The Pedigree Is Sacredly Guarded by the Tribe.

"It is said that Arabian horses have deteriorated, Count. Can it be true?"

"No, madam, it is impossible for the true Arab horse to deteriorate so long as the Arab tribes follow the same laws, and so jealously guard these rare breeds from loss by sale or theft. They have a race of horses called the Levantine which they offer in exchange for money and merchandise. These horses are excellent [illegible] and in every way desirable, but they do not compare to the true [illegible] as a [illegible] horse to the swift runner."

"Are there many distinct breeds?"

"There are but five, and every one entirely different and with distinctive marks. Those most highly prized, most rare and valuable, are the Nedjar and the Osman. The other three, the Ablalla, Dakir and Mohammed, [illegible] are as pure, and as impossible to obtain by purchase, have not the same matchless beauty."

"But were not the horses presented to General Grant by the sultan thoroughbred Arabs?"

"Certainly not. They were only the common Levantine horses, showy and stylish, strong and with fine points, but they were not thoroughbreds, as the sultan has never had a pure thoroughbred Arab in his stables."

"Is this fact generally known and believed?"

"It is of course well known in Europe among such horsemen as study the different breeds and have seen the true Arab in its native land. These five breeds which I have mentioned are considered so precious that every precaution is taken, not only by the owners, but by the whole tribe, to prevent their sale or loss by intrigue, and the Arab tribes, with all their peculiar creeds of hospitality, have never arrived at that state of civilization which could induce them to give away such treasures."

THE FAMOUS OMAR I.

"If an owner should be tempted by an enormous price to part with a descendant [illegible]—there are no geldings—he would be put to death by his tribe, while the man who had the temerity to seek such a purchase must do so with the risk of his life.

"The famous Omar I, who now belongs to the empress of Austria, the finest horsewoman in Europe, traveled three days and nights over the hot and barren plains of the Arabian desert with but two quarts of barley for food and an occasional tuft of the Sahara clover. Only twice was there water found for him to drink. Fleet as a bird, he ran, seemingly unconscious of his burden, and arrived at the wall before Cairo apparently as fresh as when he started. The two Sloughi, enormous grayhounds called 'antelope catchers,' which were a part of Omar's outfit and always traveled with him, were lagging miles behind, footsore and weary; but Omar neighed cheerfully, encouraging them to approach, and promising to them rest and refreshment in his sympathetic whinnies."

"Will you describe him?"

"His skin was black, and shone through a fine glossy coat of silver gray hair, his mane full and long, and his tail, which swept the ground, was black. About fifteen hands high, in form the most beautiful that can be imagined in any four footed animal, he was fleet as the wind, graceful as the antelope, trained to every agile movement, and with an endurance incredible. In disposition faultless—kind, gentle, caressing and obedient—he had never known whip or spur or even a harsh word, giving always the best he knew."

"Does he still live?"

"He was alive when last I heard, and is now about forty years old and in his prime, as the Arab horses are almost as longlived as a man."

STORY OF THEIR PEDIGREE.

"Do they make good war horses?"

"In battle their extraordinary evolutions remind one of the gyratory movements of the swallow when it flies. They turn and wheel with such rapidity that it is impossible to get a shot at them, and if they run nothing can catch them, their wonderful wisdom and cunning leading them and their riders out of difficulties the most serious."

"Where are they found?"

"In Mecca, Medina, Palestine and the Persian gulf are found the Nedjar and Osman. They have the Ablalla race in the Atlas mountains as well as between Afghanistan and the Persian mountains, where also live the Mohammed and Dakir breeds. These horses descended as heirlooms from father to son, and no possession is so precious as these exquisite animals. Their pedigree is carefully preserved with that of the family's own, and their names descend as do those of the generations of kings. Sometimes many or all the members of a tribe will be each a part sharer in a horse, and this horse is left by will to a successor. One cannot sell his share without permission from the rest, be he ever so much in need, and it must be an unusual circumstance, indeed, which could gain such permission."

"Doubtless their pedigree dates a long way back."

"The legend regarding them, which is said to be a true one, is this: During the reign of Mohammed he sent his grand vizier with his army in the hope of conquering China. For five years they traveled over mountain and valley, through forest and desert, climbing rocky precipices to descend on the other side into the rivers and streams. Unparalleled hardships befell them on their long journey thither, and were not lightened on their return, inasmuch as every horse died on the road except five beautiful mares. From these and the Dzigguetai (pronounced Gigati) are descended the five rare breeds so closely guarded by the Arab tribes.

"The Dzigguetai are the wild Arabian stallions of the desert, outmatching and outwitting the wary and cunning Arab in his various devices to approach them, never letting him get nearer than half a mile. After exhausting every other artifice, the Arabs have lain concealed in the desert by being buried in the sand for days and nights, with the fruitless hope of securing them by throwing their lasso at long range. But these untamed and untamable creatures, with their intelligent instinct, scented danger from afar, and kept their half mile distance between themselves and their would be captors.

"In this dilemma it occurred to the far seeing Arabian that this race could at least be perpetuated and improved by arranging some equine marriages. Picketing the five beautiful mares near their hunting grounds, they were offered as brides to the Dzigguetai and accepted. The result gave everything most valued in the horse as well as matchless beauty."—Dinah Sharpe in New York Times.

THE BALTIMORE BONAPARTES.

The Old Mansion Is Now the Property of Mr. Charles Bonaparte.

[Special Correspondence.]

BALTIMORE, Sept. 14.—The old Bonaparte mansion is situated on the corner of Cathedral and Center streets in this city, and is an object of curious interest to all visitors. It is now the property of Mr. Charles Bonaparte, the grandson of Mme. Bonaparte. He was the favorite of his grandmother, and to him she left her enormous wealth, for in spite of the fact that she lived in a hall bedroom in a boarding house, this eccentric woman was very rich. Mr. Charles Bonaparte is a lawyer, a genuine Frenchman, who speaks English quite brokenly. He served in the Franco-Prussian war, and is fond of Paris, spending much of his time in that gay city. At present he is abroad, and the beautiful old mansion, which suggests architecturally both Arlington and Monticello, is closed.

The story of "Elizabeth Patterson," the beautiful Quakeress, who was the wife of Jerome Bonaparte for a time, who was repudiated by his family, and who lived out her restless life in her native city, is one of our national romances. Her portrait hangs in the historical rooms of the Mercantile library in Baltimore, and shows her to have been a beauty.

"She had the most wonderful hands and feet," said Isabel Mallon, the well known journalist, in speaking of Mme. Bonaparte. "I recall her when I was a little girl and used to spend hours in the Mercantile library poring over my favorite books. I used to see this slight little old lady flitting restlessly about. One day she came up to me and asked, 'What are you reading, little girl?' I showed her my books and she said she would select some for me, which she did. After that we used always to talk together, and one of the pleasantest memories of my childhood clusters about those whispered conversations in the silent library. She took off her gloves and showed me her exquisite hands and told me that she slept with long thimbles on her slim taper fingers. She described her wedding gown to me, saying it was of two widths of silk mull, with one mull petticoat worn beneath. She scorned the idea that women were more healthy in those days, saying that in her day women wore muslin gowns and satin slippers through the most rigorous winter weather. She also said that the reason women have not as beautiful necks and arms and shoulders in these days is because they cover them too much."

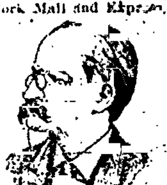
Mme. Bonaparte is buried under a huge slab partly of polished and partly of rough marble. Her name, "Elizabeth Patterson, wife of Jerome Bonaparte," and the date of her death are inscribed, with this legend, "After life's fitful fever she sleeps well."

EDITH SESSIONS TUPPER.

END OF AN HONORABLE CAREER.

Sudden Death at Paris of Major Bundy, a Veteran of War and Journalism.

Major John M. Bundy, late editor in chief of the New York Mail and Express, was born in northern New Hampshire, but was taken in early life to Beloit, Wis., and was therefore known as a citizen of that state. He was educated at Beloit college, where Matt Carpenter, afterward famous as orator and senator, was his most intimate companion, and the friendship formed there continued during Mr. Carpenter's life.



MAJOR J. M. BUNDY.

A course at the Harvard law school completed Bundy's mental equipment, and he was entering upon active life when the civil war began. He entered the army and saw much active service, most of the time on the staff of General John Pope. He had done some newspaper work on the Milwaukee Wisconsin before the war, and after leaving the army became musical and dramatic critic, as well as editorial writer, on the New York Evening Post. In that place he was closely associated with William Cullen Bryant.

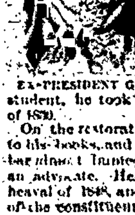
In 1868 he was made editor in chief of The Evening Mail and after thirteen years service with it was retained in the same capacity when it was joined with The Express in 1881, the new journal being The Mail and Express. Colonel Shepard, present proprietor, recently provided for a brief foreign tour for several of his writers, and it was while on his vacation that Major Bundy died in Paris.

To the general public he was well known as the author of the campaign life of Garfield in 1880. General Garfield himself chose Major Bundy for that task, and most of the writing was done at Mentor; the work was done in six weeks, and is generally considered the best of its kind ever produced.

HE WAS PRESIDENT OF FRANCE.

The Long and Successful Career of the Late M. Grevy.

Francois Jules Paul Grevy, who died the other day at his birthplace, Mont Sous Vaudrey, in the eighty-fifth year of his age, was a typical Frenchman of the middle class. The son of a mountaineer who was a Republican and a soldier, Grevy at an early age imbibed the antimonarchical principles that characterized his whole political career. When a law student, he took part in the revolution of 1830.



EX-PRESIDENT GREVY.

On the restoration of peace he returned to his books, and after admission to the bar almost immediately gained repute as an advocate. He participated in the upheaval of 1848, and later on, as a member of the constituent assembly, opposed the designs of Louis Napoleon. The latter recognized his activity by putting M. Grevy in jail, where he remained for several months. From the time of his release until 1868 he figured little in public affairs, and consistently refused to take the oath of allegiance to the empire.

In the year named, however, he yielded to the "established order," and was at once elected a member of the corps legislatif from the department of the Jura. Upon the fall of the empire his chiefest period of political activity began. From 1871 to 1879 his parliamentary career was distinguished by all the tact and ability of a great statesman. Subsequently as president of the republic he gave France eight years of peace and prosperity. Then came the scandal of 1887, which forced him into retirement. Wilson, his son-in-law, was charged with having sold decorations of the Legion of Honor, and Grevy at once resigned the presidency. The remainder of his life was passed in retirement.

An Old Manuscript Identified.

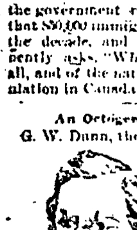
Probably not one person in 10,000 ever heard of Abu Bekr el Belhage. Yet he was the most celebrated Arabian scholar of the Eleventh century. His name has come into prominence among the erudite of late in connection with a manuscript owned by the Upsala University museum. It was acquired by the Swedish scholar Hasselquist during his travels in the east in 1749-51, and was presented by Queen Louisa Ulrika to the university. It is in Arabic, but owing to the title page not being genuine the authorship has never been ascertained. Professor Ahlwardt, of Greifswald, has now discovered that its real title is "Proof of Mahomet's Prophetship," and that the writer was Abu Bekr el Belhage, of the thousand volumes of whose writings only a few have been preserved.

Canada's Small Census Gains.

The people of Canada are somewhat disappointed at the showing made in their census returns. The population has increased less than 500,000 in ten years. Yet the government returns were to the effect that 880,000 immigrants had arrived during the decade, and a Toronto paper pertinently asks, "What has become of them all, and of the natural growth of the population in Canada itself?"

An Octogenarian Naturalist.

G. W. Dunn, the naturalist, has been in California since 1849, and for twenty-seven years has been collecting specimens of animals and plants from every part of the Pacific coast north of [illegible]. Despite his age and weakness he is still active and has lately completed a remarkable [illegible] through the [illegible] of Lower California and Sonora, in which he found over 100 entirely new insects and many rare plants.



G. W. DUNN.

It is a sort of surprise to learn that the business is very profitable, as [illegible] and colleges pay well for rare specimens, and the rarest plants he has recently [illegible] are for the Palo Alto botanical [illegible], which Senator Stanford [illegible]. He has collected in his time [illegible] of the insects known as coleoptera, [illegible] winged, 3,000 orthoptera and over 300 lepidoptera. Among his recent captures are a huge Gila monster and whole boxes of hissing and squirming snakes. Mr. Dunn is nearly eighty years old, and as active as the average man of forty.

An expert electrician asserts that an electric train making 125 miles an hour would require 7,000 feet in which to come to a standstill.

At the Court of a South Sea King.

A Narrative of Life on the Gilbert Islands, an out-of-the-way Group of the South Pacific Ocean.

BY

ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

A new series of letters by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, describing his experiences and adventures in the Gilbert Islands. This is a group cut off from all regular intercourse with the outside world, to which no post goes, and where only occasional trading vessels touch.

Life in this strange place is most interesting and picturesque. The articles are full of incidents and anecdotes, delightful character sketches of queer people, and dramatic bits of dialogue. The narrative is as captivating as a piece of fiction, full of color, of movement, of strange situations and pictures. The material is altogether fresh and novel. In these papers Stevenson is at his best; they show in its full maturity the charming style of the most perfect master of English of our day.

I. IN A DESERT SEA. Arrival at Butaritari. Island characteristics. The King's palace not so commodious as a laborer's house in the United States. A visit to the King.

II. THE FOUR BROTHERS. The story of a South Sea chieftain. The King acts as executioner. The harem of a tropical potentate. A prince who was nicknamed "Mr. Corpse."

III. AROUND MY HOUSE. Strange sights from the writer's house in the Gilbert Islands. A sea wall built by the hands of queens. The toddy cutters. Beautiful women of the South Pacific. Only one white woman in the islands. A sample ruffian of the South Seas. The parson of Butaritari.

IV. A TALE OF A TAPU. The King of the Cannibal Islands on a spree. Curious scenes at Court.

V. MORE CONCERNING THE TAPU. Spies about us. Attack by natives. In danger from drunkards.

VI. THE FIVE DAYS' FESTIVAL. Invited to the King's summer house. A concert of native singers. A barbaric opera. A wonderfully dramatic dance. A South Sea topical song. A native who made a flying machine. A magic lantern show.

VII. HUSBAND AND WIFE IN THE GILBERTS. A Paradise of Naked Women." Polygamy in the South Seas. Etiquette among the natives. Scenes in a Gilbertine household.

VIII. THE KING OF APEMAMA. The royal trader. The hero of song and the butt of gossip. The last of the South Sea tyrants. A savage Napoleon. An island chief who owns ships.

IX. HOW THE KING BUILT A TOWN FOR STEVENSON. Constructing a city in a day. Walled by a taboo.

X. THE PALACE OF MANY WOMEN. A retinue of dusky ladies. An evening at cards with the King. A game of royal inventions. A kingly poet of the Southern Seas.

XI. OUR ATTENDANT FROM THE PALACE. Uncle Parker and his sleight-of-hand performance. The royal cook, and how he was disgraced.

WHERE HOUSTON SLEEPS

THE GRAVE OF THE TEXAS LIBERATOR AT HUNTSVILLE.

Only a Plain Stone Marks the Old Frontiersman's Last Resting Place, but His Memory Is Held in High Honor by His Fellow Townsmen.

Few Texas towns are fraught with more historic interest than Huntsville, where General Sam Houston is buried, where he spent many years of his life and where his home stead still stands.

With what pride does the old settler point out some spot and connect Houston's name with it! How importantly does some gray headed fellow who used to discuss politics, horses and agriculture with Houston relate the fact to an open mouthed group of boys and girls, who cannot conceive that the hero of San Jacinto actually talked with the same man they are listening to, and walked over the same ground they are now standing on!

SAM HOUSTON.

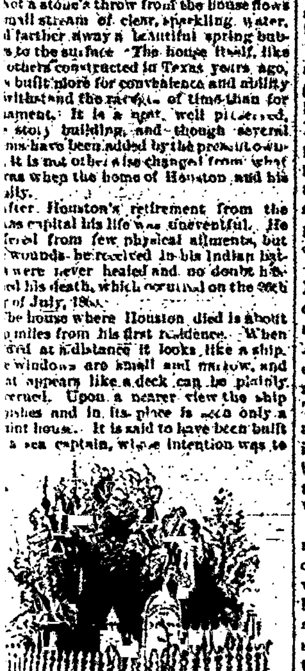
Houston—whom they know from their school histories to have been twice representative from Tennessee in congress, governor of Tennessee, commander in chief of the armies of Texas, twice president of the republic of Texas, her representative for two terms in the United States senate, and also twice her governor—did he walk these pathways, did he converse with their fathers? No wonder they can hardly realize that this man, one of the most remarkable known to history, and whose career was as brilliant and in some respects as erratic as the comet in its wildest flights, could have passed several years in the very town where they themselves live. Yet the few Walker county veterans who have not yet responded to the last reveille well remember his majestic form, his soft and clear eye, which beamed upon all with a smile that won many friends.

Houston's homestead stands at the foot of one of the hills that make the little city of Huntsville picturesque. Indeed there are so many of these hills traversed by small streams and gullies that it is a hard matter to find level spots upon which to erect residences. Houston's house, which he occupied when he first settled in Huntsville, however, is in one of the loveliest valleys to be seen anywhere. Situated about a mile from the business portion of the city, it furnished a quiet retreat for the old warrior when not engaged in public duties. In front is a clear space giving a broad view of the surrounding country for several miles. The rear is shaded by a nice forest of pine, oak and hickory.

Not a stone's throw from the house flows a small stream of clear, sparkling water, and farther away a beautiful spring bubbles to the surface. The house itself, like others constructed in Texas years ago, was built more for convenience and ability to withstand the ravages of time than for ornament. It is a neat, well preserved, [illegible] story building, and though several rooms have been added by the present owner, it is not otherwise changed from what it was when the home of Houston and his family.

After Houston's retirement from the Texas capital his life was uneventful. He suffered from few physical ailments, but the wounds he received in his Indian battles were never healed and no doubt hastened his death, which occurred on the 26th of July, 1863.

The house where Houston died is about [illegible] miles from his first residence. When viewed at a distance it looks like a ship. The windows are small and narrow, and what appears like a deck can be plainly discerned. Upon a nearer view the ship vanishes and in its place is seen only a quaint house. It is said to have been built by a sea captain, whose intention was to make it resemble a steamship, and thus remind him of the ocean he had dwelt on for many years. However, he failed to complete his design, and the remainder of the building was fitted up like an ordinary two story house.



HOUSTON'S GRAVE.

[illegible] all the places of interest connected with the hero of San Jacinto in Huntsville [illegible] has attracted more attention and comment than his last resting place.

The summer rain beats on this lonely sod,
Where sleeps a hero with an honored name,
Who in ancient times had been a god,
And worshiped in the highest shrine of fame.
[illegible] on the silent season's tread,
[illegible] deeper grows the dust above his [illegible] head.
[illegible] in the temple of the gods should dwell,
[illegible] claims a place in such a fane,
[illegible] naught his burial place to tell,
Save [illegible] Nature lends her flowers [illegible]
[illegible] old comrade with a thoughtful hand
[illegible] set a stone to keep his record grand.

The only thing that marks its identity is a marble shaft, about five feet high, on which is inscribed the following:

GEN. SAM HOUSTON.
Born March 2, 1793.
Died July 26, 1863.

The plot is surrounded by a white picket fence and is covered with [illegible] shrubbery. —MARCELLUS FOSTER.

ARGONAUTS IN VERA CRUZ.

[illegible] Hunters of '49 Visit a Mexican City and Become Discouraged.

It was Sunday morning when we dropped anchor near St. Juan de Ulloa, with its quaint ancient tower, and the city of Vera Cruz just before us.

The uniformed customs officials speedily boarded us from a small boat, and [illegible] the clanging of some scores of [illegible] Spanish bells from the cathedral [illegible] the air, the officers were [illegible] by an encounter between two [illegible] gold hunters, who [illegible] from the shoulder. We [illegible] speedy permission to land, [illegible] did not appear to enjoy our [illegible]. Sunday was passed in [illegible] at the sights in the old Spanish [illegible] and bombarded as it had [illegible] years before by the artillery of [illegible] Scott.

[illegible] buildings constructed of [illegible] rocks were shattered as he had left [illegible] fragments of bombs and solid shot [illegible] the streets where his cannon [illegible] and along the beach were [illegible] dilapidated wrecks of surf [illegible] he had abandoned them. [illegible] army wagons, caissons and [illegible] carriages were scattered about, [illegible] thousands of Yankee made pack saddles were offered us for our journey. These pack saddles, though the production of army contractors, had only served the purpose intended—that of enriching the contractors.

The only pack saddle found useful was the Mexican one, consisting of two great pillows of leather connected and hung astride the mule, and, weighing without the "cargo" some eighty pounds, on the top of which or suspended from it would be a load of some 200 pounds.

As our war with Mexico had just closed, and the ignorant masses yet held us in the same enmity with which they had regarded their conquerors, matters did not look favorable for a peaceful passage over the whole extent of Mexico, especially as we expected to follow the route taken by Scott's army and to pass over battlefields where, as we learned, the dead skeletons lay still unburied. The government, in fact the whole country, was yet in a state of demoralization, and guerrillas and robbers infested almost every mile of the way.

Besides this, merchants of intelligence in Vera Cruz warned us that we were almost sure to be robbed and murdered, that if we should escape this fate we could not find provisions on our journey for men or beasts, and that we would most surely break down our animals and be glad to resort to horse or mule meat to sustain life. Impressed by these tales (which found fulfillment to some extent even as to mule meat, with rattlesnakes added), about fifty of the most pronounced and boastful among our company took a return passage on the vessel for New York.—Colonel A. C. Ferris in Century.

Strange Facts About Accidents.

The collection of large groups of facts about accidents which has been made necessary by the development of accident insurance has made a contribution to one department of social science that is by no means uninteresting. For instance, it is a curious fact that a man is much more likely to lose his left hand than his right hand, or his left eye than his right eye; statistics show, too, that when a man insures himself against accidents he thereby greatly diminishes the risk of accident—and this is probably explained in this way: When a man's attention is called to a danger he fixes his mind on it, and thereby consciously or unconsciously makes unusual effort to avert it. It therefore happens that a man is more likely to be a victim of an accident of a kind that he never thought of than of the kind against which he insures himself.

A man, for instance, who handles sharp tools will insure himself against an accident from the use of them, and the first thing he knows he will be drawing pay from an insurance company for an injury done by getting a cinder in his eye.—Forum.

Deaf-Blind Institute Notes.

Superintendent J. E. Ray of the state school for deaf and blind, returned Wednesday evening from Pueblo, where he had been disposing of some of the mattresses made by the blind boys. He is now arranging to add broom making and chair making to the blind work rooms and these trades will be taught within a few weeks.

The classes are now about arranged and the scholars are making good progress. Instruction in water color has been introduced in the art course and Mr. Campbell has a number of very promising pupils. To an outsider the progress made by the deaf scholars in art studies is marvelous. They seem to start with a conception of form and perspective that a hearing person acquires only after months of drill.

The new kindergarten teacher, Miss Margaret H. Taylor, has thriving classes of both deaf and blind pupils and they are making substantial progress. Miss Ada R. King has a number of large classes in articulation and the members are all showing marked improvement. They take great interest in their work and it is an interesting as well as affecting sight to see a row of little tots with hand mirrors watching the motions of their vocal organs as they try to form words.

The new dormitory building is badly needed and to relieve the pressure the officers have given up their sunny private dining room for a dormitory, beds have been placed in the sewing room, and as soon as the hospital cottage south of the old building is done, some thirty or forty boys will sleep there.

The new steam laundry machinery has arrived and is being put in place. When ready for use it will greatly aid in the work of the institute. Mr. Ray has secured the services of a practical baker and this trade will be taught some of the boys and girls this winter.

There has been a great deal of trouble caused in former years by people waiting to send their children to school until after the classes were all formed and well along in the work of the year. This is a bad practice as it breaks up and delays the rest of the school, and so Mr. Ray has issued a notice that no scholars, except new ones, will be received after Oct. 1, unless good reasons are given for their absence.

The Colorado Index, the paper published in the printing office of the school has again appeared as carefully and well printed as ever, showing that the printing office has not abandoned its high standard of workmanship. The Index is a very readable paper, interesting [illegible] an interest in educational matters.

Manitou.

Mr. J. Cryder, of Denver, is in town looking for a location for a jewelry store.

Mr. T. A. Hood, manager of the Mineral Springs hotel, is slowly recovering from his recent attack of fever.

Rev. A. K. Stabler, pastor of the Methodist churches of this city and Roswell, left yesterday for Galveston, Tex., on a visit to friends.

Mr. J. B. Dyer and Mrs. Martha Norris were married yesterday afternoon at the Norris house by Rev. A. K. Stabler. They left on an evening train for Hot Springs, Ark., where they will spend the winter.

The long switch on the rapid transit line extending from the Feeney residence around the point of rocks to the lime kilns is completed. Work is also nearly done on the switch opposite Red Rock canon, and when this is done the service will be greatly improved.

The Kindergartens.

That the demand for kindergarten education is steadily growing in this city [illegible] by the fact that the Association Kindergartens, now two in number, are full to overflowing, having been open but a week.

Miss Dewey of No. 1 has fifty pupils enrolled, which is nearly [illegible] average attendance, so she cannot at present take any more in justice to those she has. Miss Yard of No. 2 has twenty-five, all that her small quarters will accommodate. A much larger number could be taken if a good sized room could be added to the building.

Appreciative Resolutions.

The following from the [illegible] Falls, N. Y., Star [illegible] which Mr. W. A. Lloyd, who has accepted a call to the general secretaryship of the Y. M. C. A. of this city, is held:

"At the regular meeting of the board of directors of the Young Men's Christian association held last evening, Rev. George W. Brown, D. D., Col. L. C. Cunningham and Hon. F. A. Johnson, the committee appointed to draft suitable resolutions upon the resignation of General Secretary W. A. Lloyd, reported as follows and the resolutions were adopted:

Mr. W. A. Lloyd, the secretary of this association from the date of its organization, having tendered his resignation to take effect October 1, 1891, and the same having been accepted by the board of directors at a special meeting held August 25, 1891, we now desire to place on record our appreciation of the faithful service of Mr. Lloyd during the nearly four years he has been with us, and to bear witness to the Christian spirit uniformly manifested by him. We believe he has had the welfare of the association always in mind, and has conscientiously given it his best energies and service. Our intercourse has been a pleasant one, and he will carry with him to his new home our sincere wishes for his success, and that the change of relations may result in his spiritual and temporal increase, and the promotion of the best interests of the association he is now called to serve."

The date of the grand pyrotechnic exhibition at the Broadmoor Casino will be announced in a few days. The fireworks are now on their way from Chicago and include a number of water [illegible] that are very fine.

The fall months in the mountains are the most pleasant of the year, and so all who wish to enjoy the cool bracing air and mountain scenery at Cascade at a low rate should join the Congregational Sunday school picnic to-morrow.

To-night at the Baptist church Rev. C. H. Green will lecture again on the Cliff Dwellers, using the stereopticon views which were lacking on the former occasion. At the close of the lecture the audience will have another opportunity to inspect the collection of relics. Admission twenty-five cents.

Next Saturday a party of teachers and pupils from the Deaf-Blind Institute will make the ascent of Pike's Peak on the cog road leaving the school at 12 m. [illegible]. The excursion has been granted a special low rate both on the railway and the electric cars, and friends of the school are cordially invited to join it.

The certificate of incorporation of the Pandora Mining and Milling company was filed with the county clerk yesterday by Messrs. C. E. Noble, A. Sutton and Charles Ludlow, incorporators. The capital stock is $1,000,000 divided into the same number of shares at one dollar each. The directors are D. M. Holden, M. M. Van Fleet, F. L. Martin, C. E. Noble and C. E. Stubbs. The principal office is to be in this city.

Police Court.

There were three cases brought up before Police-magistrate Kinsley yesterday morning.

Two of these were about as usual, one being a case of drunkenness and the other one of carrying concealed weapons. The prisoner figuring in the former case was given a fine of seven dollars and costs, and the one in the latter $10 and costs.

The third case was that brought against a man named Lane, who was charged with conducting a lottery business. Lane has been for the past week conducting a store called "The New" opposite the old postoffice on South Tejon street. In this place he has been selling worthless pictures of actresses for twenty-five cents, and the purchaser was given the privilege of exchanging the pictures for a number. These numbers brought forth various things, all the way from a gold watch to a brass ring. Two city detectives were sent to the place yesterday, and brought to light the way in which Lane was doing business. He stated in the court that a Greeley attorney had told him that his lottery scheme was on friendly terms with the law, and as Lane firmly believed that to be the case himself he was discharged upon his promise to leave the lottery business alone henceforth.

The New City Bonds.

After deciding to reject all the bids offered for the issue of $70,000 of the city water bonds opened last Tuesday night, the finance committee opened a correspondence with other banking firms and at last succeeded in disposing of [illegible] per cent. premium to the [illegible] Investment company of Boston, the company is to bear the expense of engraving the bonds and is to rebate the interest from Oct. 1 to Oct. 15, amounting to $175. The bonds will be delivered on Oct. 1 and the city will get $70,700 cash for them.

With the 5 per cent. viaduct bonds the finance committee has not been so fortunate. The best offer they have got yet is 96 per cent. which they have not accepted. In the meantime the First National bank will supply such money as may be needed, holding the bonds as collateral.

A Visit to the Cliff Dweller Ruins.

This is just the trip that thousands of people contemplate taking as soon as the way of getting there is made a little more easy and less dangerous. The difficulty of access to these ruins and the dangers from surrounding savage tribes have been so great that few have ventured to explore them. Rev. C. H. Green, the champion relic hunter and explorer, completed an extensive and thorough exploration of these ruins the last of June. On this tour Mr. Green had a party of seven whom he organized for the purpose of searching these palaces and huts for relics as well as photographing them and the hieroglyphics. This evening at the Baptist church he will take his auditors with him in an imaginative tour over the Rocky Mountain range, down the Pacific slope to these ruins, giving views along the way, and then entering into the canons will give many views of the houses perched far up in the sides of the canons. He will have about 100 of the best specimens of his collection, including three mummies, to exhibit in connection with the lecture. The admission will be only twenty-five cents.

Richard III.

The eminent actor, Mr. Thomas W. Keene, will appear in "Richard III." at the opera house Monday evening. The Denver Republican says: "Richard III. with Thomas Keene in the title role, drew out the largest crowd so far this week at the Tabor Grand last night. The applause was liberal and the audience was intensely interested in this, the admittedly greatest portrayal of the star. For years it has been conceded that Keene is the only Richard, and the verdict of the audience last night was only an endorsement of this. The cruel, crafty monarch, in all his quickly changing moods, was a living picture drawn from the chronicles of the long ago, dimmed not in the coloring by age, nor dulled in action by the lapse of years. Richard's himself again, to the spectators. They saw the workings of his selfish, inordinate ambition that stooped to no less than a crown, set above rivers of blood, and they saw his end on the bloody field of Bosworth. The actor was Richard.

"Mr. Frank Hennig was magnificent as Richmond. His lines are powerful and he read well in the scenes when he was on he compelled applause. Mr. Walter Matthew's Duke of Buckingham was splendidly handled.

"The Queen Elizabeth of Miss Henriette Vaders came out particularly strong in the scene in the tower, where she was torn from her sons. Miss Alberta Gallatin gave a finished and delightful performance of the part of Lady Anne, her scenes with Richard being artistically handled."

MARRIED.
